Subject : Fatima, and the President Vladimir Putin Visits to Vatican City and the Pope

Dear Mr. Antonov:

Please note that the enclosures are also forwarded to an official of the White House. * I believe the subject-related request is simple.

It was been reported that President Putin has visited Vatican City and the Pope on several occasions. Though not widely reported, but assured through several credible sources, during his 2016 visit President Putin specifically asked, or attempted to ask, questions relating to the events of 1917 in Fatima, Portugal. Reportedly he included inquiry regarding the connection between those events and Russia.

One of the credible sources is Bishop Richard N. Williamson:

For example, in a presentation of May 16, 2016, Bishop Williamson was asked by a member of the audience :

Q: "Your Excellency, did Putin ask the Pope to consecrate Russia? That's something I had heard."

A: "Yes, did Putin, Vladimir Putin ask Pope Francis to consecrate Russia to the Immaculate Heart of Mary? In other words, did Putin ask the Pope to . . . it seems, I would say 'yes' he did. Or at least he came to Rome, and he wanted to talk about Fatima. And it seems that the Pope said, 'We do not talk here about Fatima.' That's apparently what happened." **

Question and Request

I feel my question and request is very simple. Please contact President Putin and ask if the subject and the above rendering by Bishop Williamson is accurate. Specifically:

Did President Vladimir Putin, at any time during any of his visits to the Vatican, either directly or through an intermediary, make inquiry or requests of the Pope about the events of 1917 Fatima?

Personally, I believe he did, but I would like at least an indication directly from your esteemed President. Please send him my regards, and sincere wishes for Godspeed.

Please respond to the address above, and do not hesitate to contact me at any time. Thanking you in advance, I am,

Respectfully yours,

Paul V. Sheridan
