Subject: Unreasonable Skymiles Requirements Escalation(s)

Dear Mr. West:

As you will note from Attachment 1, I flew First Class in February 2018, DTW-SAN-SNA-DTW. The trip comprised many business elements/commitments, spanning almost two weeks. Delta did their usual terrific job; all the way around.

Resulting from these February 2018 travels was a need to travel to my alma mater, Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. Delta, to their credit, offers non-stop service DTW-ITH. Gate to gate this trip consumes no more than 60 minutes; I have done it many times. My next DTW-ITH trip spans 29 March; returning 8 April 2018.

I attempted to schedule a Skymiles reservation, beginning on Friday, 23 February, while still at the Irvine Marriot, using their business center PCs. When I attempted this reservation on that Friday, a full FIVE weeks of advance purchase, the Delta website declared that this short trip required :

104,000 Skymiles!

When I telephoned Skymiles (800-323-2323) your staff agreed/proposed that it was a Delta system “glitch,” and that I should try again, a few days later, anticipating that the system would be corrected . . . that was two weeks ago.

As of this letter, nothing has changed.

I have since spoken and online-chatted with not less than SIX Delta staff members, and all are confused by this ongoing mileage requirement.

One staff member (Melody) suggested, in a somewhat ad hoc manner, that this unreasonably high Skymiles requirement was associated with Spring Break. Some basic observations / facts that I reviewed with her:

1. People LEAVE Ithaca, New York at the beginning of Spring Break, at that beginning they do not go there en masse.
2. At the end of Spring Break, people RETURN to Ithaca, New York, they do not leave en masse.
3. People are not on Spring Break until Saturday, 31 March; having exams and commitments right up until that morning . . . alternatively, I am ARRIVING in Ithaca two days earlier.

I wanted to cover those details as a matter of full-disclosure, but as you will now see, these are not relevant, having no documentable connection to the 104,000 Skymiles absurdity:

- That is . . . I reviewed with Melody and another five Delta staff, simultaneously with them, that travel dates that are WEEKS before the Cornell Spring Break, and therefore have no connection to that event whatsoever, have the same absurd travel requirement:

104,000 Skymiles!!

But this gets better . . . that is, worse.

I inquired with the Skymiles system (for my dates 29 March to 8 April 2018), trips to locations which involve THOUSANDS of miles and MANY HOURS of travel time. I did this to document comparative Skymiles requirement ranges; sample minimums-to-maximums, as shown here:

DTW-SAN	32,000 to 74,000
DTW-LAX	30,500 to 82,500
DTW-SNA	35,500 to 83,500
DTW-HOU	17,500 to 104,000

So . . . using Skymiles on my dates of (29 March to 8 April), I can travel nearly 4000 miles, all the way to Honolulu, Hawaii, for 17,500 Skymiles . . . but you want 104,000 miles for Ithaca, New York? A 60 minute flight??

9 March 2018

Mr. Wayne Gilbert West

I have attached for your file/review just a small sampling of the flights and Skymiles requirements discussed above.

Note on the attachments, that for my dates, there is no range . . . it's 104,000 Skymiles, or take the bus. That alone is a first.

Note also that the $$ price for this trip is still $206 . . . which does not correlate to the Skymiles requirement of 104,000. That is, typically, in my MANY experiences, Delta dollar requirements correlate in magnitude to Skymiles requirements . . . these both move up or down in lockstep . . . but curiously not in this example.

In conclusion, I am now in the situation where, because of this delay in making a reservation that is reasonable/agreeable, I am no longer eligible for the benefits of advance purchase . . . again, I tried to make this reservation FIVE WEEKS prior to travel, back on Friday, 23 February 2018.

Please look in to this for me . . .

Respectfully,

Paul V. Sheridan

P.S. One Delta staff member, also in ad hoc manner, suggested that the 104,000 might be the result of "available seats for Skymiles travel." Again, that does not connect to the MANY dates I sampled which, again, are WEEKS prior to the alleged demands of Spring Break, and everything in-between . . . hence my many attachments/samples.
